They suit most surfaces and applications - and we are quite unique in that we can also install our finishes over concrete, timber or tiles.

Urban Murano Range

Epoxies are well known for their excellent chemical resistance. They will not harbour bacteria and can withstand spills from oils, acidic solutions, detergents and other surface contaminants. Until a few years ago, epoxy floor coatings were used only for industrial applications because they are seamless (hygienic), durable and renowned for their excellent chemical resistance.

Now, given their unique nature and versatility, they have become popular in the residential housing market and specified by architects and designers in commercial projects.

Urban Lucido Range

We also offer an exclusive finish – the PANDOMO Flooring System opens up a multitude of design possibilities, offering a range of advanced natural looking concrete finishes for your floor. The finishes fulfil the highest requirements for style and long term durability.

The Urban® Stonehenge

Our Stonehenge finish is practical to work and live on, and can offer a slightly more textured finish than our resin floors. It has a more understated look and feel and is very popular in both residential and commercial applications.

Urban Warehouse

If it's an industrial warehouse look that you are after, then we have the perfect finish to create that look, exposing the aggregate (or stones) in your concrete.

This finish is perfect for cafes and restaurants, apartments and retail environments.

Urban@ Commercial / Industrial

Flooring systems in wet process areas generally require a slip resistant profile which must also be easily cleaned, and are totally impervious and resistant to water and chemical exposure.

Our industrial flooring options provide a full range of non slip/anti skid profiles and classifications and have certification according to the latest EEC guidelines for their suitability for use in the food industry.

Decorative concrete floor finishes are becoming increasingly popular due to their seamless finish and ease of living.
